

A native of Upstate New York, Diana and her husband Steven landed in Savannah in 2010 after a very quick search of the southeast, and loved everything about the city, especially the nod to music of all kinds. With a maternal grandmother who was a concert pianist, and a paternal grandmother who played the organ at an upstate NY church for 75 years, there was no getting around the love for music in her family, and the American Family Songbook was always on the piano.

Now retired, Diana made her career as a successful business manager within the technology space, and then as an owner of an IT services company that she sold in 2020. She has broad experience in the development of high level client relationships across several industries and though she has experience in many facets of business, her interest and efforts generally lean toward the marketing and concept development space, where brands and ideas are brought to life.

Diana and her husband have been involved with the American Traditions Vocal Competition for six years as donors and sponsors of competitors and accompanists. Diana has been involved in board and philanthropy commitments for many years including the March of Dimes, Savannah Philanthropic Partners, Wilmot Cancer Center in Rochester NY, and boards and committees for sports teams.

When downtime is available, Diana enjoys golf, travel, music, cooking, sports of all kinds and entertaining friends and family. Diana and Steve enjoy the “island life” on Savannah’s Skidaway Island.
